SUMMARY:

If my drive to this property along quiet country lanes, and fleeting pretty villages was anything to go by, I was in for a real treat at the end of my journey and wow was I right. What first struck me was the feeling I had seen this before, then I realised I had, in my dreams. What we have here is a stunning property with oodles of character from the dappled creamy old stones, the romantic pigeonnier, the mesmerising views to the vast accommodation on offer. I was well and truly besotted and so will you be when you visit. But don't dally too long, this gem of a find won't last long.

LOCATION:

With ravishing views across open countryside with an ancient church steeple in the distance, this 200 year old property occupies an elevated position and consists of three adjoining but separate properties of character. The extensive grounds form a series of terraces with each part of the house having its own terrace and lawn area, with a range of decorative trees including cypress and mulberry, catalpa, parasol pine, evergreen magnolia and acacia trees and if that was not enough you are not far from the spectacular Gorges of Aveyron and Najac and Cordes the two imposing hill towns . . .
